School Support

Richmond Youth Service Agency (RYSA) in partnership with the Richmond School District and Vancouver Coastal Health has a Aboriginal Child, Youth and Family Worker who is currently taking referrals for the 2012-2013 school year. The service works with the school district, counselors, community agencies, other service providers and RYSA to ensure that Aboriginal children, youth and families are supported to receive or access resources and assistance they require to promote health and wellness, success at school and at home with respect and consideration of their diverse traditions, and culture.

Service include:

- One to one support in school or out of school
- Assistance with accessing services and supports in the community to meet individual/family needs
- Goal setting and mentoring
- Skill building activities
- Cultural activities
- Assistance with school issues or challenges
- Family nights
